

What's Cookin' > the Barolo hopper.

Tuesday, Oct 11 2011

This week's tablehopper: the Barolo hopper.

Um, wow. I could use upwards of 20 different pictures for today's intro image. This last week in Piemonte was simply extraordinary. The Langhe region, and I was in the Langhe—Italy is famous for the extraordinary and Barbaresco and the absolute each meal was sleeping on the Boscareto, let's bunk bed at camp. And it was so nice again—my brain be home. And the absolute and u

In the meantime my computer y for ya—yeah, I concerned about his high level of was less of an

(a word he's not a fan of). I especially enjoyed his thoughts on the many stages and iterations and concepts an original idea can take, and his belief in sharing information and ideas. We also got a sneak peek of the upcoming

El of ou Th the I will be at the Le Diner & San Francisco, which should be a fun one, and Saturday I'll be participating in a Litquake event, do come by!

Enjoy the sun! Ci vediamo!

Marcia Cagliardi

“Buon giorno! The stunning view from my room at Il Boscareto.”

“And after a week of sleeping on the fantastic bed (and linens) at IL BOSCARETO, let's just say my bed at home feels like a bunk bed at camp.”

m my ber.com.

escape
s a pic

ges and e). It
ativity

ked out
y, check

vents of nds and

Litquake