LA: HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU

Here's Looking at You could only be in LA's Koreatown, the dense ethnic enclave west of Downtown. In a sleek space on busy Sixth Street, Jonathan Whitener, late of Animal, puts out a pan-Angeleno small-plate miscellany that can go the route of hamachi collar with Nashville hot spice and apple slivers, or soft shell prawns with avocado, sauce diablo and rau ram. Danielle Françoise Fournier's small but selective wine list threads the needle with a suite of high-acid reds and whites, whether Onward's Malvasia Pét-Nat, Sandhi's Sta. Rita Hills Chardonnay or Lieu-Dit's Loire-inspired Santa Ynez Cabernet Franc. —PATRICK J. COMISKEY
