All The Wedding Food Trends You'll Be Seeing Everywhere In 2019

Psssst: Signature cocktails are NOT dead yet.

Long gone are the days of knowing exactly what you're going to eat at every wedding you attend. Everyone from trend forecasters to planners to caterers agree the formulaic-ness of cocktail hours, dinners, and other wedding eats are behind us.

"There's a move to more activity-centered, Instagrammable [cocktail hour] stations. We recently created an 'action' station with one of our chefs hand-carving Iberico ham to serve with crostini." -Heather Jones, Catering Sales Director, Wente Vineyards

"As a venue and caterer we're always looking for ways to stay eco-friendly, [and wedding drinks are a good place to start with] more straw-less or alternative options such as paper straws and bamboo stir sticks instead of plastic." -Heather Jones

"We actually see lots of edible favors—cookies with the couple's monogram, wine bottles for guests to take home. There's a decline in traditional favors like coasters, coffee mugs, and magnets, and couples are steering clear of spending per person on favors that may not be taken home." -Heather Jones
