

J&S WINE RATINGS

GOING VEGAN: THE WINE WORLD'S 'LO-FI' EVOLUTION

Friday, November 12, 2021

Although they comprise just a small percentage of sales in the wine industry, certified vegan wines are gaining traction. Winemakers are starting to pay more attention to consumers' concerns about their own well-being, as well as to animal ethics and the environment. But the difference between vegan and non-vegan wines is less obvious, at least as far as what is finally poured in your glass. It's just fermented grape juice – isn't it?

Three of the top vegan wines rated for this report were, from left, the Cune Ribera del Duero Arano 2018; the Domaine Carneros Blanc de Blancs Le Rêve 2013 and the Amato Vino Savignin Margaret River 2020.

Instagram

domainecarneros
Domaine Carneros Winery

domainecarneros As winegrowers, caring for our planet is paramount. Since our founding, we have put sustainable efforts at the forefront, ensuring our impact on the land is minimalistic. Discover the ways we live lightly on the land, and join us in toasting our amazing earth! 🌍💚 #earthday

36w

393 likes